Translate the following texts to Persian. (6 points)

1. It is also important to distinguish between intention/purpose and motive/desire. A person may intend a particular consequence without either desiring it or it being the motive for their actions. (e.g. "mercy killings", where a person gives an overdose of medication to a terminally-ill relative. Here, while they do not desire the death of their loved one, and their motive is to relieve suffering, they nevertheless intend to kill). (2 points)

2. Insanity, in this context, is a legal, not medical concept. It is designed to cover those situations where, because of some mental infirmity, the defendant should not be held responsible for their actions. Where raised successfully, it results not in an acquittal, but in a special verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity". This allows the court considerable discretion in dealing with the defendant, ranging from an absolute discharge to detention in hospital. (2 points)

3. The two main criticism of the present law are that:

- a. the test for gross negligence manslaughter is circular, in that the jury is directed to convict the defendant if they think his conduct was criminal;
- b. the scope of constructive manslaughter is too broad, encompassing both conduct which is little short of murder and that which is little more than an accident. (2 points)

Part two: Translate the following texts into fluent Farsi.

1. The distinction between automatism and insanity is important because while the former result in an acquittal, the latter results in the special verdict. The purpose behind this distinction is to allow those whose mental condition does not represent a continuing danger to the public to go free, while permitting the detention of those who, though they are not criminally responsible for their actions, do remain a threat.

2. It is voluntary manslaughter where one person kills another as part of a suicide pact between them. A suicide pact is a "common agreement between two or more persons having for its object the death of all of them, whether or not each is to take his own life" and "nothing done by a person who enters into a suicide pact shall be treated as done by him in pursuance of the pact unless it is done while he has the settled intention of dying in pursuance of the pact."

Part two: Translate the following texts into fluent Persian.

1. Where a person is faced with a violent, unlawful or indecent assault, he may be justified in using force in self-defence to repel that assault. Both the decision to use force and the degree of force used must be reasonable in the circumstances as he believed them to be. In deciding the question of reasonableness regarding both issues, some factors must be considered.
2. Incitement is an offence at common law. To incite means to instigate the commission of a crime through advice, encouragement, persuasion or compulsion. The actus reus of the offence is the act of incitement, whether this is in writing, speech or by conduct. As with attempts, a person may be liable for incitement even where commission of the offence is factually impossible – impossibility is only a defence where the act incited is not, in fact, a crime. The mens rea is an intention that the offence will be carried out.

- 1.The idea of fault is present in the principal maxim of the criminal law.
2. This is traditionally referred to as malice afore thought. It is a vital concept as it is the presence of malice afore thought which distinguishes murder from manslaughter. There are two forms of malice afore thought.
 - a. intention to kill (express malice).
 - b. intention to cause grievous bodily harm.(implied malice)
3. Placing another in fear of immediate and unlawful personal violence. This may be done by acts alone (e. g. raising one's fists at some one) or by acts and words together.
4. The preliminary offences (some times called in choate offences) concern criminal liability for the preparation or instigation of criminal acts. It is obviously necessary and desirable that the law enables the police to interence to prevent planned criminal activity and the courts to punish those involved without having to wait for the full offence to be committed.
